

Surplus Food Collection Volunteer

About the role

FoodCycle volunteers are welcoming and committed people who want to help support communities during the coronavirus pandemic. As a surplus food collection volunteer, you'll be playing a vital part in making sure guests who are no longer able to go out can receive food parcels. You'll pick up surplus food collections from our partner supermarkets and local retailers, ensuring a prompt, reliable and friendly collection each week. You'll then bring the surplus food back to our project and store it securely. You can do this by bike or by car!
